The Monster Under My Bed

I listen in the darkness
For that dreaded sound
The lies and screams
In which I drown.

Yet today I overcome
That sense of fear,
And under my bed
I go and peer.

And when I bend
I gasp as I see:
The face of the monster
Is the face of me.

A Pen is Better than a Therapist

Feel the cold pen
Pressed against your hand
And feel the overwhelming power
As it latches to your soul
And the emotions roll out
Together and one by one
Weaving together
A tapestry of spun gold
Not like the emotions that cower
At the sight of the therapist
Afraid of judgement
Of a probing gaze
But flow instead
In an endless stream
Beautifully sad, sadly beautiful
And with it goes the fear
As you gaze at your emotions
Displayed and accepted
As their perfectly imperfect selves
By a seemingly ordinary pen.

A thoughtful read

✓ Verified Purchase

I really enjoyed reading 24 Windows to the Soul. It's a thoughtful blend of poetry and illustrations that invites reflection rather than comfort. Each poem makes you think, often from a new perspective. The themes of love, loss, hope, and renewal feel honest and relatable. This is the kind of book you don't rush through. You can open it at any page and find something that makes you pause and think about your own experiences.

A stunning collection of poetry and art. The fact that the author is only 13 makes this work even more extraordinary. The poems capture the essence of love, loss, and renewal with honesty and beauty. Paired with excellent illustrations, this book is a moving tribute to the human experience. A must-read that proves talent knows no age!

24 Windows to the Soul is a beautiful and deeply touching read. Each chapter gently explores emotions and life reflections in a simple yet powerful way. What makes it even more remarkable is that it is written by a 14-year-old, showing incredible maturity and sensitivity. The illustrations for every chapter are wonderful and enhance the overall experience. A thoughtful and heart-warming read.
